1. Background: What was the motivation for your project/program? Was the project/program originated by your group? If not, explain how your group got involved.
 2. Execution: Describe your project/program. What activities were involved? Please indicate what part of the project/program you or your group were responsible for (i.e., recruited and trained all volunteers, obtained in-kind donations from local businesses, etc.). Make sure you include the number of volunteers and number of volunteer hours for the program and data on volume collected/recycled, etc. If you worked as a partner with other entities, please explain what you or your group's responsibility to the project/program was. If you are entering the business/industry category, indicate the number of employees.
 3. Results - Describe your Outputs: Outputs are often described in numbers; outputs are measurable and easily determined. For example, if you conducted a litter prevention event, how many people were involved and how many bags of litter were collected?  - Who did your project/program reach? How? Describe the number of volunteers and number of volunteer hours.
 - What was your budget and how was it funded? Include any in-kind donations, goods, or services you received.
 - What recognition did your project/program receive or give to volunteers?
 4. Impact: Describe your Outcomes: An outcome is the beneficial effect your program/project produces on the people your project/program serves. An outcome is a change that occurred because of your project/program. Outcomes are the difference made by outputs. Keep in mind that outcomes might be in the future. For example, if you planted a school native garden an outcome would be that the students now understand plants that are grown in their area.
 - What community benefits did your project/program achieve?
 - What were the consequences associated with the program/project? Were incentives provided or enforcement implemented?
 - Describe the impacts of the project/program: Environmental Impact, Economic Impact and/or Social Impact.
 5. Sustainability: Is the project/program a continuing effort or a one-time project? Does it demonstrate the need for ongoing action? If so, did you create a sustainability plan?
